AN INNOVATIVE APPROACH TO THERAPY, AN ALTERNATIVE TO SURGERY!

Diane Gauthier can recall life before visiting Innovative Therapy Canada in Cornwall – it was a life filled with pain and suffering, and efforts to resolve it failed. Her anguish and desperation was overwhelming because she did not want to be forced to leave her career which she enjoyed as it supported her as a single parent with 5 children.

Today, thanks to the innovative treatments provided by Glenn Cameron at Innovative Therapy Canada, she once again is enjoying life.

"I lived and worked with excruciating pain, having to sit often in an attempt to get relief. The problem was with my low back and hip which Glenn quickly identified and fixed. Today I'm 90 per cent pain free, which is miraculous, having suffered some permanent damage while trying to find someone to identify the problem and fix it."

It's a story Cameron has gotten used to hearing.

The founder and CEO of Innovative Therapy Canada, located at 30 Thirteenth Street East, is using cutting-edge technology to treat conditions that don't respond to conventional therapy.

In the process, he is making a name for himself. Patients from all over the world travel to Cornwall to receive the life-renewing treatments that Innovative Therapy Canada provides from Cameron's well-appointed clinic on Thirteenth Street East.

Cameron has pioneered a new treatment approach for difficult to resolve conditions which cause pain, by integrating his professional use of shockwave therapy with neuromuscular therapy and magnetic therapy. The results have been impressive, and his clients are leaving the clinic with a new lease on life after having gone through other therapies with little to no success.

His approach is unique, because Cameron is unique among others in his industry. As a legally-blind therapist, Cameron uses a keen sense of touch, and a wealth of knowledge and experience, to pinpoint the exact nature of problems.

"It's important to have a connection with your clients, to understand the pain they live with on a daily basis. It puts them at ease, and it allows me to get to the root of their issue," said Cameron.

Just ask Jean Cardinal, an avid hockey player who was left with a shoulder injury following an awkward check on the ice.

"I had pain all the time which was annoying to work with through the day," said Cardinal. "But it was the nights that were the worst. The pain would be unbearable once I laid down to sleep. Cameron suspected a tear, and indicated to Cardinal that his therapy could not fix the tear, but could eliminate the pain totally allowing Cardinal time to decide whether to pursue surgery. With treatments completed, pain gone, and full strength returned to the shoulder, Cardinal made the decision to not undergo surgery. Cameron did a fantastic job on my shoulder."

After just four treatments Cardinal was pain free and enjoying a good night's sleep once again.

"I had no idea that therapists like Glenn could actually feel tears in tendons or ligaments, but he could –and he did," said Cardinal."

Among other treatments, Cameron has used his knowledge and experience, as well as his skill as a shockwave professional to develop treatments for whiplash, concussions and scar tissue resulting from surgery, to name a few. Cameron has treated patients from across Canada (Ontario, Quebec, BC, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Nova Scotia) from the U.S. (Wisconsin, California, Illinois, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, Texas). Some from as far away as Ireland, Australia, India.

"One by one, we're fixing people," said Cameron. "We're also bringing people to Cornwall for treatment that they can't get anywhere else. It's a pretty neat thing for Cornwall."

In addition to treating difficult to resolve conditions, Innovative Therapy Canada has developed non-surgical alternatives for carpal tunnel syndrome, degenerative disc disease/low back and neck, peripheral nerve entrapments responsible for pins/needles sensations into arms and legs, arthritis of the hands and feet, and their highest achievement of bunions and hammer toes.
